Think in Ink About This Is It!

Sometimes we think the grass is greener elsewhere. What if the greenness of the grass depends on the greatness of the gardener? Maybe the grass is greener where it's watered.

When we let events dictate how we feel about our life, we're letting ourselves be controlled like a puppet. The concept of "This Is It!" is the concept of altering our attitude to redefine our experiences. It's the concept of not just "showing up" for life, but showing up with the full intention of living in the present moment, fully experiencing any given situation with passion and vigor. We can adopt an attitude of eagerness, curiosity, and fascination in all areas of our life whenever we want to. Why not now? Our attitude impacts every single experience we have.

1. What is something I have experienced this week that I have never done before?
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________

2. What did I get out of it?
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________

3. In what way(s) could I have made it more of a "This Is It" moment?
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________

4. Why is it important for me to "go for it" 100% in my life—to make every moment count?
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________
   __________________________________________________________